Design Concept

PANDORA

Architecture is just like a bridge between man and nature. That's why PANDORA is described as a box-shaped bath space that is "opened", bringing nature from the outside into inner space so that people can feel connected with the nature.

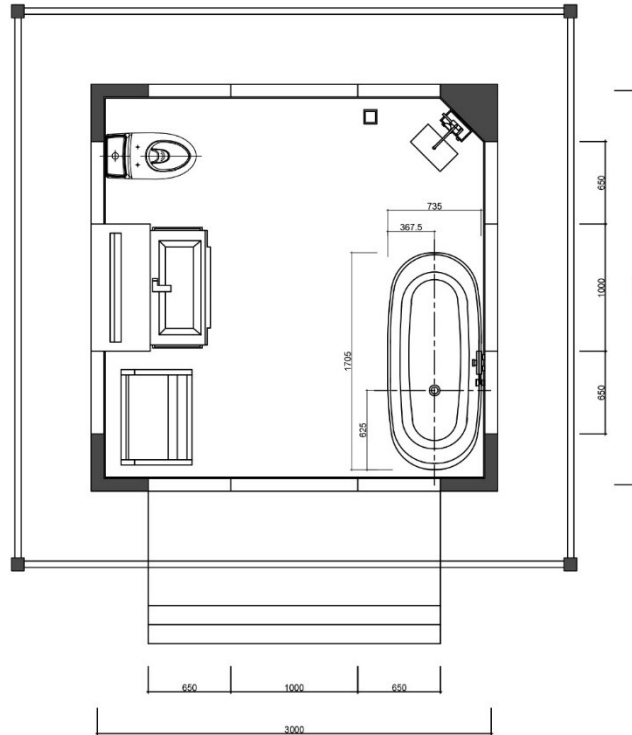

With the main idea to make the most of the nature's beauty as well as to strongly emphasize people's sense of nature towards their health and happiness, PANDORA is designed as an open box block consisting of 2 main wall layers. The solid wall inside is stylized to open up the outside space, making users feel the nature around them. The mirror glass wall helps cover, shields the inside space and also expand the view.

Overall, Pandora is like an open-closed box, both private and open. It is a space that reflects the way people live and remind that all future causes and effects come from today's actions.

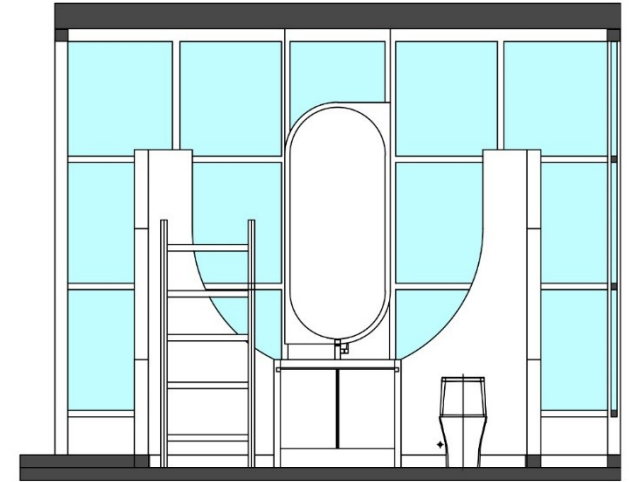

Design: Floor Plan and Elevations

The box-shaped bathroom is designed separately into 2 layers. The outer wall is made of one-way mirror, shielding and providing a view to the bathroom. The inner wall is designed as white film, expanding the view. Users can imagine themselves as the center of the bathroom and the surrounding nature implies that it have a very important influence on health, architecture, and nature.

Design Visuals: Full Bathroom

At first glance, the bathroom looks like a big box with an interesting design but still reflects the luxury and privacy.

The glass wall is designed to be open to facilitate air convection in the bathroom as well as to bring people closer to nature through seeing, listening...

Design Visuals: Shower Area

The shower area is designed to be as simple as possible. The space is often left empty and there is no need adding or subtracting other items to increase the bathroom space. Users can enjoy the feeling of being immersed in nature to the fullest.

Design Visuals: Optional Images

The design is symmetrical, creating a static space that makes it easy for users to enjoy relaxation and feel nature. The mirror glass wall is to see the outside space but also to be reflective. It means that what people do nowadays will affect their latter life. Nature, health, happiness... come from our smallest actions

Design Visuals: Optional Images

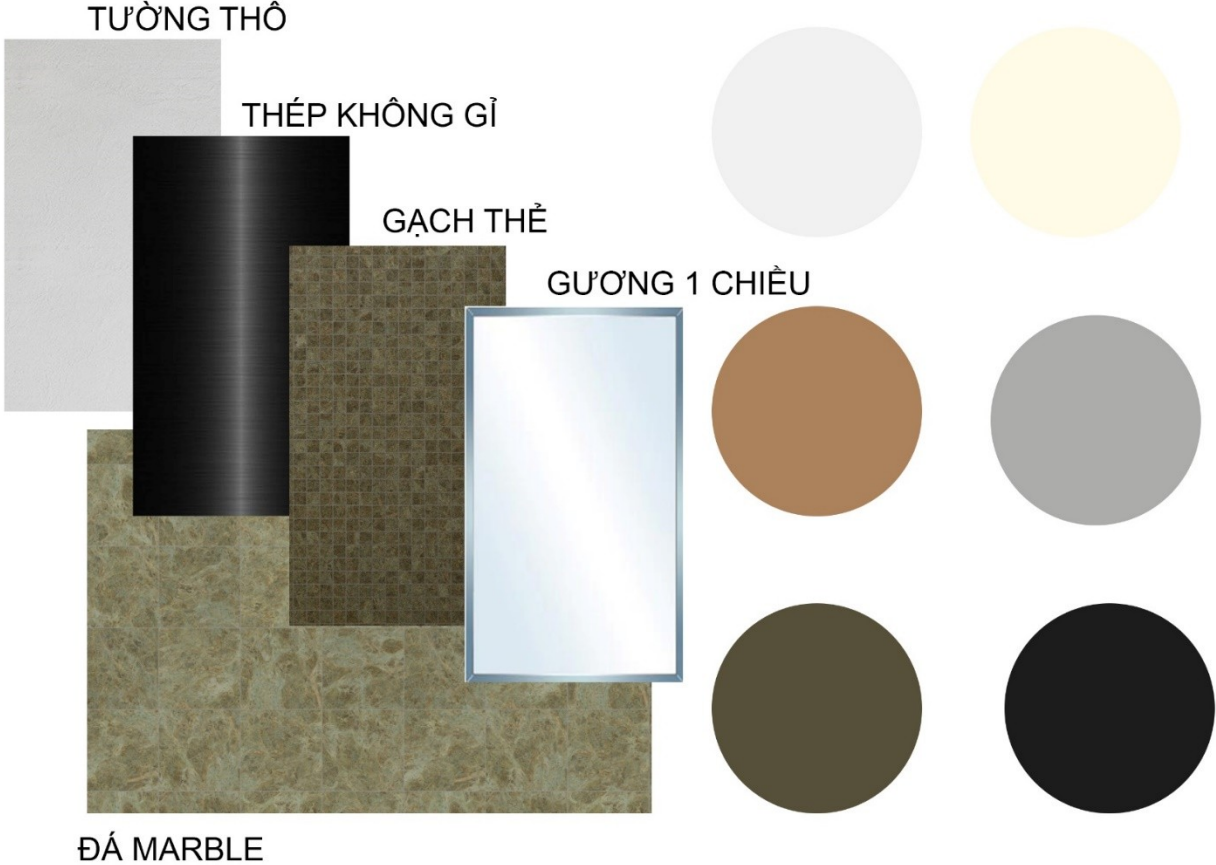

The outer mirror glass is designed to minimize the impact on the environment. The fact that hotels or resorts often pay little attention to this element usually has a drastic impact on the surrounding natural scenery.

Overall, Pandora bathroom is simply designed as a closed box, making the users feel curious and want to "open" it. The "present" inside depends on the person's consciousness.

Specifications: Colors, Materials and Finishes

Using simple, rustic materials with neutral and green colors to create a familiar feeling, close to nature but still retain the luxury and modernity required for a high-class resort/hotel.
