Design Concept

With the hustle and bustle of life in the chaotic city, people are gradually exhausted in all aspects, especially spiritually. One of those moments of self-healing is soaking in the bathroom. It is said that the bathroom is a place where we are alone, now we are connected to our souls. It is also said that when we run out of energy, we need to connect with nature more. It would be great to combine those two things, separate yourself from the hustle and bustle and then immerse yourself in the green place. The design plan ensures that each function in the bathroom can connect with nature. Users can touch and feel nature directly, while being immersed in the soothing waters.

Design: Floor Plan and Elevations

Cycle – Connection – Infinity

When we run out of energy, we need to connect with nature more. It is the energy of heaven and earth, the energy of plants, the energy of mother earth, the energy of life. It would be great to combine those two things, separate yourself from the hustle and bustle and then immerse yourself in the green place. At times like that, our thoughts flow like that, drifting in the air, drifting into the mountains...

Color

In order to match the context of the forest and hills, the color palette chosen therefore has a similarity with the landscape. Integrating with nature

Material

The materials used for both the building as well as the bathroom space are mainly wood, bamboo, straw, recycled plastic, etc., which do not affect the environment here.
